The Champ-Élysées, one of the most famous streets in the world, is a thriving epicenter of cultural diversity; an attraction for not only ethnicities and cultures, but also of ideas, philosophies and opinions. Lined by cinemas, cafés and boutiques, the street is visited by thousands of people from all walks of life. Chelsea shares the same elements of diversity that make the Champ-Élysées so remarkable. The show Summer on Chelsea-Élysées aims to convey that same spirit of diversity with five very accomplished and very different artists.

Both New York and Paris attract art lovers from around the world. However, it is predominantly the melting pot of New York City that is now the epicenter of cutting-edge art. Chelsea has become the desired artistic destination of the art world. The work in this exhibition highlights the dynamic interaction between cultures that is unique to this city. Five artists, each from a different country exhibit their expressive style through various media of painting, sculpture, and watercolor. The cohesion of these various styles highlights the appeal of the catalytic potential specific to this creative environment.

While Paris has an avenue of champions, they clearly have competition with the artistic champions that are drawn to Chelsea. Anna Zorina Gallery is located on 23rd street, the only dual way road in the gallery district, the bustling location draws international and local visitors alike. As an artist, to exhibit on this specific New York location is to accomplish victory. Summer on Chelsea-Élysées celebrates artistic champions.
